Rule D Erosion and Sediment Control Notice-of-Intent:

A person disturbing surface soils or removing vegetative cover on more than 5,000 square feet of land or stockpiling on site more than fifty (50) cubic yards of earth or other erodible material, but not requiring a permit under the criteria of this rule, must submit this notice in advance of disturbance on a form provided by the District (also available electronically at www.ricecreek.org) and conform the activity to standard best practices established by and available from the District.

A permit is required for:

- Surface soil disturbance or removal of vegetative cover on 1-acre or more of land;
- Surface soil disturbance or removal of vegetative cover on 10,000 square feet or more of land, if any part of the disturbed area is within 300 feet of and drains to a lake, stream, wetland, or public drainage system; or
- Any land-disturbing activity that requires a District permit under a rule other than Rule D (e.g. floodplain alteration, wetland alteration, development or stormwater management plans).

Note - Rule D does not apply to normal farming practices as part of an ongoing farming operation nor mill and overlay that does not disturb the underlying soil.
